

Create a marketing campaign for Talgo's Hydrogen Train!

Names:

Year Group:

School:

A Spanish rail company, Talgo, has just come to Chesterfield! Talgo is leading the way in innovative and sustainable technology in rail. In 2020, they announced the development of their very first hydrogen-powered train, which is due to be ready by 2023.

Fun fact:

Hydrogen trains are emission free, meaning they're an environmentally friendly ('green') alternative to existing diesel powered trains. They are also considerably less noisy than their diesel counterparts!

Let's start by learning a little more about sustainability and hydrogen power!
Match the word to the definition. After all, this might come in handy for your challenge!

Create a marketing campaign for Talgo's Hydrogen Train!

Your task: Imagine you're part of the Marketing and Communications team working on Talgo's hydrogen train, which is ready to open its doors to its first set of passengers.

You must design a marketing campaign to promote the hydrogen train and its benefits.

Your campaign must include three key elements:

- A press release: A press release is an official statement issued by a company to newspapers giving information on a particular matter
- An advert for the train to attract passengers: this could be a poster, a billboard, or if you're feeling extra creative, a short TV advert in the form of a video or a 'storyboard'
- Social media: Think about how you might communicate the hydrogen train on Twitter, Instagram or Facebook, and come up with some example posts.

What do we mean by 'marketing'?

The term 'marketing' refers to all of the things a company might do to promote their products or services to customers. Marketing is all around us: adverts, product packaging and social media posts are all examples of marketing techniques. Marketing can be done subtly, or it can be obvious!

Top tips

Think about who your audience is

Is there someone in particular you want your target? For example, commuters who use trains to get to work everyday, or, young people.

Consider persuasive writing techniques

You might have learnt about these in English. These can include alliteration, lists of three, and the use of facts and statistics.

If you're working in a group, think about how you can divide the responsibilities.

For example, one person could focus on social media, whilst another works on the press release.

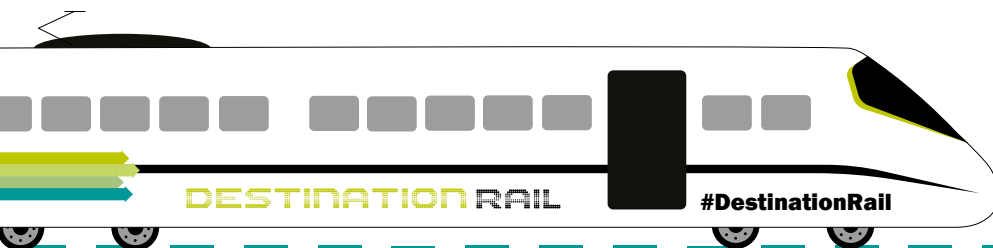

Do some research!

You might want to do some internet research into hydrogen trains, renewable energy, sustainable technologies or rail travel in general, to help you 'advertise' the train.

How can you use colour and images?

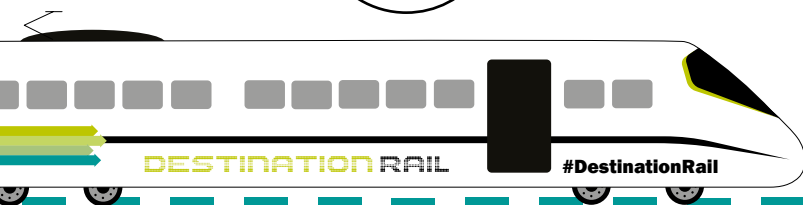

The use of eye-catching colours and imagery is an important tool in marketing.

Ideas and planning page

On this page you could include some initial ideas you or your group has around your marketing campaign. You can even jot down any research you have found on hydrogen trains.

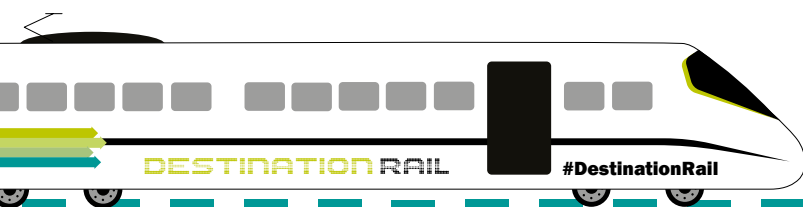

Ideas

Press release

Top tip: Have a look at examples of press releases on the internet to help you get inspiration for yours.

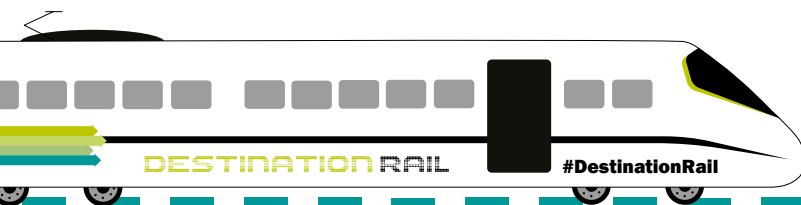

Once you have drafted something, it can be handy to get another person to proofread your work to check for spelling and grammar mistakes! Editing is an important part of producing written marketing.

Advert

Top tip: Think about all of the different formats you have seen adverts in. Perhaps you want to design a poster, a billboard, or even something for TV....

This could be done as a video (in which case you could insert the link below to be watched by the judges), or as a storyboard.

Social media

Top tip: Think about the social media apps and platforms you use and how companies use these to market their products.

Perhaps you'd like to design some 'stories' for Talgo's Instagram account during the lead up to the event, or even some Tweets to announce the opening of the hydrogen train...
